What is the Apartment Maintenance Apprenticeship Program?

The Maintenance Apprenticeship Program (MAP) is a six-week program that is designed to train aspiring maintenance professionals (with little or no experience) for a career in the apartment industry. This program consists of in-class instruction at Emily Griffith Technical College and paid on-site training (apprenticeship). Both parts work simultaneously over a six-week period to prepare the student for a career in maintenance.

Is a job guaranteed at the completion of the program?

No. Just like any paid internship, the job opportunity depends on the effort you put in. For example, if you are engaged, ask questions, get along with the maintenance team and show great customer service skills during the program, then it will be more likely that you will receive a job offer. If the opposite is conducted, you may risk getting removed from the program.

Does this program provide any certifications?

No. Because this program is a short entry-level program, you will not receive a certification. However, you will be eligible to take the Certified for Apartment Maintenance Technicians (CAMT) exam at no cost to you after completing MAP and one year working in the industry. The exam typically costs $1,000. The Apartment Association will pay the fee as another way to encourage you to grow in this career. There are also other certifications that maintenance professionals can earn throughout their career, such as Certified Pool Operator (CPO).

How much does this program cost?

You may be qualified for paid tuition! Emily Griffith's fee for the class is $700. If you get accepted into the program with paid tuition and later decide to drop out or get dismissed from the program, you will be responsible for paying the remaining tuition to the Apartment Association of Metro Denver.

What is the average salary range for apartment maintenance professionals?

The base salary varies by apartment management company and the number of apartment units at the property. The salary also depends on the certifications the person has earned. Below are salary averages per the 2017 Compensation Report, a report conducted by the Apartment Association of Metro Denver.

- Groundskeeper: $29,532
- Maintenance Technician: $37,964
- Maintenance Supervisor: $58,618
- Regional Maintenance Supervisor: $60,000 +

Who is the ideal candidate for this program?

The ideal candidate:

- Is serious and ready to start a new career in the apartment industry
- Loves working with their hands
- Has great customer service skills
- Enjoys working in a team environment
- Will prioritize this program while enrolled
