Policy on Publication of Articles by Outside Authors in the APBA Reporter and on APBAhome.net
Adopted: October 7, 2009

Articles submitted for publication by the Association of Professional Behavior Analysts shall not implicitly or explicitly solicit business for the author, his or her company, or any other body in which the author has a financial interest. The Association of Professional Behavior Analysts reserves the right to request that any solicitous material be removed from the article before publication, and to refuse to publish any article for any reason, or for no reason. Articles describing products or services shall be published with the following disclaimer: Publication of this article does not imply endorsement by the Association of Professional Behavior Analysts of the author or of any products or services described in the article, and the Association is not responsible for actions on the part of readers who elect to purchase services or products from the author or to follow advice provided in the article.
