FACSIMILE EDITION DESCRIPTION (3)

"The largest, the most perfect, the best preserved, and the best illuminated of all the papyri". These are the words of Sir Ernest Alfred Thompson Wallis Budge regarding the Papyrus Ani, which he acquired for the British Museum in 1888 after it was found in an XVIII dynasty tomb near Thebes.

The Book of the Dead

The Book of the Dead is the modern name of a funeral text from Ancient Egypt, used from the beginning of the New Kingdom to 50 BC. The text features a collection of magic-religious formulas which were to protect and aid the deceased in his journey towards Duat – the realm of the dead, said to be fraught with hardship and peril – and toward immortality.

There was never a standard and unique edition of the Book of the dead and no edition is identical to another. the papyri preserved up to modern days feature many selections of magical formulas, religious texts, and illustrations.

Alternate Titles	El Libro de los muertos – Papiro de Ani
Features	Manuscript book on papyrus – 38 × 70 cm – 37 segments
Origin	ca. 1300 BC – Egypt
Theme	Sacred Texts
Language	Hieroglyphics

Teaching Special Collections in the Time of COVID-19

Elizabeth Teviotdale used a Facsimile Finder video to teach a graduate seminar at Western Michigan University. The lesson should have taken place in the Special Collections library, but was transferred online due to the health emergency. This is the account of her experience.

Elizabeth Teviotdale

Liz Teviotdale's research and publications focus on early medieval liturgical manuscripts of the Latin West and their il...
