After reading nearly 50 different resources on peer review, the Review of Higher Education editorial team selected the following articles to share with our community. We believe that the following resources provide key information and tips for helping our reviewers to provide in-depth, relevant, and critical reviews of academic research. Our editorial board takes the approach that reviews are a way to be in conversation with authors and are meant to collaboratively strengthen research, whether an article appears in our pages or elsewhere. We welcome further recommendations and will update this list when appropriate.
