CARD CHECK UPDATE

A Timeline & Other Labor Law Updates

California Union Updates

SB 399

"Worker Freedom from Employer Intimidation Act," prohibits employers from mandating employee attendance at meetings intended to convey the employer's views on religious or political matters, including unionization.

Employers found in violation may face civil penalties of $500 per employee per violation, enforceable by the Labor Commissioner or through private civil actions.

How to Protect Ourselves

Be Alert to Union Activity in the Fields - If you see/hear the following activities, please call your manager or HR immediately.

- An employee asking another employee to sign something.
- An employee passing out papers or written material to co-workers.
- Employees gathering and talking with different groups while on Company property, having potlucks, donuts, snacks, when they did not do this before.
- Employees asking you questions about unions.
- Changes in the negative comments about the company: Me to Us.
- Employees wearing union buttons, shirts, or driving vehicles with union flags and stickers.
- Employees making comments about the union.
- Change in employees attitudes, questioning job assignments or supervisory authority.
- One or a few employees going from crew to crew to speak with employees or going from one group of employees to another during the breaks and lunch.
- Use of union buzzwords: Seniority, bumping, grievances, job security. “We need a voice,” and “Dignity and respect.”
- Non-employees walking into work areas or the fields without permission. HOW TO DEAL WITH THEM.
