

JACK MUMMA MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Jack is Construction Contract Administrator at Michigan State University (MSU) – responsible for procurement, contract administration, and delivery strategy. He is also part of the team that works to improve MSU project delivery processes. Jack led MSU's efforts to implement the first IPD project at a public university and led a team that realigned his department's financial structure, giving more transparency to the process.

Jack is adjunct faculty to MSU's School of Planning, Design, and Construction and holds the CM-Lean designation from AGC, one of the first Owners to earn this distinction. He is a past president of the Construction Owners Association of America (COAA) and was instrumental in COAA's decision to become a charter member of the ConsensusDocs consortium. Jack is also on the Board of AGC Michigan and is president of the Midwest Region of APPA.

Jack is a graduate of DePaul College of Law and St. Mary's of the Barrens. He previously served as a contracting officer with the Office of Naval Research. Jack and his wife Jean live in East Lansing and have two adult children.
