ARC Gaming set for big year

Leading master licensee well positioned to grow

By Paul Tash

Georgia Amusement Journal

After completing its takeover of the bankrupt Lucky Bucks COAM operation last year, ARC Gaming & Technologies is ready to fortify its position as a leading COAM operator in Georgia.

“2025 is a big year for us,” CEO Bill Nader told the Georgia Amusement Journal earlier this month. “The focus ... when we took over was to reintroduce the company to the industry and set a different direction as to how we see the COAM market playing out in the next three or four years.”

Joining Nader in leading ARC’s goal in “recreating the company” is David Sloan, who is serving as co-CEO and chief financial officer. The two bring significant experience in distributed gaming in the United States.

Nader was a founding managing member of Gaming & Entertainment Management in Illinois, which became a major player in the Illinois market with about 2,400 machines before its acquisition by Delaware North in 2016. He also held a leadership position at United Coin Machine Co. in Nevada, which operated about 8,500 machines.

Sloan has been in gaming for over 30 years – 25 of those specifically in slot route/video gaming operations. His experience encompasses operations, regulatory, accounting/ finance, market development and executive management and has helped build numerous gaming companies. Sloan began his gaming career as an agent with the Nevada Gaming Control Board and then served as a senior consultant and accountant at KPMG Peat Marwick.

Nader and Sloan will oversee ARC’s operational management and financial strategy and lead its efforts “to deliver state-of-the-art, engaging gaming solutions for convenience store owners and customers in Georgia.” ARC, with over 2,000 Class B COAMs in Georgia, is one of the largest game distributors in the market.

Lucky Bucks grew quickly as a master license holder in the Georgia COAM market since the industry’s regulation in 2013 through an aggressive path of acquisitions and mergers. However, it declared bankruptcy in early 2023, and the company’s loanholders at the time successfully petitioned the bankruptcy court to take over the company in an effort to recover their investment. In October 2023, the company changed hands from Lucky Bucks to ARC Gaming & Technologies and emerged from bankruptcy.

The loanholders, who are now the shareholders, recapitalized the company, significantly reducing debt and building equity, “resulting in a healthy balance sheet,” Nader said, “which is what you need if you’re going to regrow a business.”

“With the shareholders we

Ryken brings security to COAM market

By Paul Tash, Georgia Amusement Journal

With state-of-the-art security measures and innovative route management technology, Ryken Security is hoping to revolutionize the COAM market, a company official said.

Ryken Security’s proprietary, patent-pending technology, developed exclusively in-house, sets it apart, according to David Villari, vice president of Ryken Security. In an interview with Georgia Amusement Journal, Villari emphasized the importance of staying ahead in a rapidly evolving industry.

“Technology evolves every day,” Villari said. “Businesses need forward-thinking partners and cutting-edge tools to ensure seamless and secure access to their assets.”

At the heart of the system is a specially designed router, which communicates with an operator’s mobile phone via a dedicated app.

“It’s an extremely unique and intelligent technology,” Villari said, noting its sophisticated features.

The router is equipped to detect movehave, it's a very strong, vibrant company," he said.

Nader said it was his and Sloan's responsibility to completely redo the management team and business infrastructure "to create the type of business we like to run."

"We're used to running fairly large operations," he said.

Nader said his leadership team took most of 2024 to "restructure the company and get it to a point where it has an ability to grow now."

The company spent much of last year investing in machine upgrades in the market, ensuring they meet "the standards we wanted them to be," he said. "It's an ongoing process," he added.

Just as importantly, he said, the machine-upgrade process provided an opportunity for the company "to become more familiar with our customers ... and what they're looking for." He said ARC also has been sharing its vision with its locations and "our investment in them."

Restructuring the company, creating an experienced leadership team, and engaging with its customers are "all the pieces we know we're going to need to grow the business in the future," Nader said.

Georgia market growth

Nader said the growing Georgia market has attracted significant interest and investment from a variety of new gaming technology companies and gaming manufacturers, "most of which we have very close relationships with."

"We're a pretty good platform for them to bring in their technology," he said. "We're able to bring it in, get access to it relatively easily, and get out into the field quickly."

The new technology arriving in the market in general "is good for the industry," Nader said. "It provides some new excitement for players," he said.

Noting that Georgia is the second-largest distributed-route market in the country, behind only Illinois, Nader said, "we're used to operating in markets like this."

"It's a good opportunity for us," he said. "There's no reason Georgia can't grow rather dramatically in the next three to four years."

Customer service

ARC will focus on customer service and has begun working with its locations to ensure strong partnerships, Nader said.

"We knew coming in that we needed to be more hands-on with our location owners and operators," he said. "We spent a long time focused on that last year."

That customer-driven approach will be ongoing, he added, "getting in front of them, understanding what they need, getting input from them, so we can set some strategies on the technology we can implement."

Proactive marketing

He said ARC's marketing team will be more proactive, as well, now that master licensees have more freedom to work with locations to promote their business, thanks to legislation passed in 2024.

"That has created a lot of ideas, which is why we created a whole marketing team," he said.

Anna Madrigal-Mueller will be leading those efforts as ARC's director of marketing and communications. She brings more than 20 years of experience in driving strategic marketing, brand building, consumer engagement and business growth to the company. Her previous roles include business development for Kimberly-Clark, a Fortune 500 company, and CNN, a leading media network, where she led content strategy, production and brand visibility.

Nader said he and his leadership team are extremely bullish on the Georgia COAM industry, and the ongoing implementation of the gift card "will be critically important" to industry growth.

The gift card, he said, "will give the industry some stability."

"We'll be very aggressive this year in the adaptation of the gift cards," he said. "We believe it benefits our location owners and operators, and it benefits our players."

ARC wants to be a leader in gift-card implementation through kiosks and other technologies, he added.

Other members of ARC's new leadership team include Dean Martin, who as chief operating officer will oversee ARC field services, logistics and product development. In addition, Daniel Davila has been named chief revenue officer. Davila will oversee the company's strategic growth initiatives.

"With our expertise and commitment to integrity, ARC is poised for great things ahead," the company said. "Now with the right team in place to develop the business, including new product launches, ARC is ready to fortify its position as a leading COAM operator in Georgia."

Parker's optimizing future growth

Melissa Kress

Convenience Store News

Parker's Kitchen, headquartered in Savannah, is boosting its supply chain and logistics capabilities to support the company's future growth.

The convenience store operator expanded its partnership with Nashville, Tenn.-based Titan Cloud, a fuel asset optimization software company, in a strategic move to help accelerate plans for growth and operational improvements in the fuel retail sector.

"We've always believed in the power of digital innovation to improve our operations," said Ricky John, vice president of fuel at Parker's Kitchen. "Titan Cloud has been a key partner in supporting our growth by providing the tools we need to make data-driven decisions, enhance supply chain efficiency and reduce costs. By expanding our use of their platform, we are setting ourselves up for long-term success and ensuring that we can meet the demands of our growing network."

The retailer first implemented Titan Cloud's unified platform in mid-2021 to optimize operations, ensure compliance and streamline fuel management. In the latest pact between the two companies, Parker's Kitchen is expanding its use of Titan Cloud's end-to-end platform, adding tools for inventory management, forecasting, and hauler and carrier oversight to support its goal of doubling in size over the next five years.

"Titan Cloud is excited to support Parker's Kitchen as they scale their operations," said Paul Lauinger, vice president of sales North America at Titan Cloud. "Our platform's powerful supply and logistics capabilities equip them with the tools to improve efficiency and drive growth. We are committed to helping fuel retailers optimize operations through data-driven insights, and we look forward to continuing our partnership to help Parker's Kitchen achieve its goals."

Parker's Kitchen has realized substantial gains from its use of Titan Cloud's core platform modules, such as Fuel Insights, Environmental Compliance and Advanced Facility Inspections, according to a new release on the expanded partnership. These tools streamline daily operations and maintain compliance across the company's network.

As Parker's Kitchen expands its footprint, the company recognizes the need for a more robust, digitally driven supply chain to ensure long-term success, the release added.

To support future growth, Parker's Kitchen is prioritizing advanced forecasting. With Titan Cloud's Fuel Insights, the company has gained visibility into fuel usage and demand patterns. Leveraging these insights, Parker's Kitchen aims to refine its demand forecasting to reduce fuel runouts, minimize operational disruptions and gain real-time visibility into fluctuations across its sites. Additionally, Parker's Kitchen is prioritizing hauler and carrier oversight. While Titan Cloud's platform has improved visibility into inventory for haulers and carriers, the retailer is eager to implement tighter controls and gain deeper visibility across its logistics partners. This will reduce operational issues and prevent disruptions at their sites.

Parker's Kitchen will also improve load planning to better align with demand shifts and reduce working capital requirements across locations.

Parker's Kitchen's network comprises more than 90 locations in Georgia and South Carolina. The company employs 1,600 professionals and completes more than one million transactions weekly.

INDUSTRY-LEADING TECHNOLOGY, DRIVEN BY 22+ YEARS OF IOT EXPERTISE AND INNOVATION

Experts outline 2025 c-store trends

Melissa Kress

Convenience Store News

The new year brings with it promises of the new and exciting. For convenience stores, the new and exciting includes innovative products and technologies to keep customers coming through the doors again and again.

So, what can the convenience channel expect in the coming 12 months? Food with an international flare seems to be leading the pack, as well as a continued use of artificial intelligence (AI) to better understand – and meet – consumers' demands.

Here is a sampling of trends to watch for, according to industry insiders, in 2025.

On the fuel radar

As Paul Lauinger, vice president of North American sales for Franklin, Tenn.-based Titan Cloud points out, operators in the retail fuel industry will need to either adapt to rapid change or risk falling behind.

"From leveraging AI and automation, to developing employees into brand ambassadors, to elevating the 360-degree customer experience, staying ahead means mastering the dynamics to not only foster growth but also redefine the future of fueling," he explained.

So what changes are on the horizon? There are several trends shaping 2025 that operators need to focus on to overcome challenges and turn them into opportunities, according to Lauinger. In his words, they are:

One percent write-offs are over: In the coming year, more retailers will turn to automation as a way to pinpoint inventory variance issues, including fuel loss root cause.

Artificial intelligence goes mainstream: For fuel retailers under pressure to improve margins without a steep learning curve, the choice will be easy in 2025: Fortify workflows with easily implemented AI solutions to provide measurable, near-term ROI – all while keeping pace with, or surpassing, data-driven competitors.

Mid-market enters the innovation race: Enterprise-level technology isn't just for the big players. This year, midmarket fuel operators will adjust even the tightest budgets to level the playing field with automation. The payoff? Streamlined operations, centralized data analytics and faster invoice reconciliation, all combining to optimize fuel operations from end to end.

Workforce development gets real: Convenience store leaders have been steadily updating their game to provide top notch offerings for customers. This year, that investment will extend into training the folks who bring that experience to life each day.

Brand emersion is the new customer experience: In 2025, customers will be more likely to see a professionally trained chef prepping meals to order, perhaps in an open kitchen. While they wait, they may try food samples offered by concierge staff member walking the floor. Beyond grocery items, ambiance will be a top priority in the coming year.

Waking up the taste buds

According to Datassential, 71% of consumers are excited about new food and beverage trends in the new year, with Generation Z (78%) reporting they are more excited than baby boomers (59%). In its "2025 Trends Report," the Chicago-based company outlines the top 10 2025 food, flavor and beverage trends. They are:

1. Pastina, a category of small pastas.

2. Sweet drop peppers – small, tear-shaped, vibrant, Peruvian peppers known for their sweet flavor and mild heat.

3. Chow fun, a Chinese dish traditionally consisting of stir-fried rice noodles, a protein, vegetables and a sauce.

4. Pikliz, a spicy, Haitian, pickled condiment or slaw.

5. Orange wine, made from white grapes that are fermented with their skins on.

6. Yerba mate, a South American herbal tea made from the dried leaves of an evergreen tree steeped in hot water.

7. Bonito flakes, made from filleted, dried, fermented, smoked skipjack tuna.

8. Saffron, a spice made from the dried, red stigma and styles of the saffron crocus flower.

9. Next-level fat washing, a cocktail-making technique that involves taking a fat or and infusing it into alcohol, freezing the concoction until the fat solidifies, and then skimming the fat off.

10. Short ribs, cuts of beef taken from the lower rib area that are known for their rich marbling and tenderness when slow-cooked or braised.

On the menu

Alto-Shaam, the commercial kitchen technology company, has identified the emerging culinary shifts that are set to move into mainstream influence in menu management nationwide as hope appears on the horizon for the industry.

The company's top five trends that will shape menu innovation in 2025 are:

1. Stealth health & super foods: Gen Z is demanding healthier and more sustainable options compared to older generations, including an increase in alcohol-free drink choices.

2. Cultivating global connections: The rising popularity of food tourism is fueling consumer curiosity to experience authentic flavors from across the globe.

Decommission COAMs correctly

The proper procedure to decommission coin-operated amusement machines (COAMs) can be found on the COAM Division website, www.gacoam.com. The COAM decommission procedure should be followed when there is:

- A change of master, change of ownership, or cancellation letter received by GLC;
- A COAM game board swapped out with a different game;
- A COAM malfunction.

To proceed with the decommissioning:

1. Call Intralot before disconnecting the COAMs from a location and removing those COAMs. The Master License Holder (MLH) needs to contact the Intralot Hotline at 877-261-6242 to properly decommission COAMs. The COAMs must be connected to the site controller at this time.

2. Intralot will let you know when the COAMs are decommissioned. The Intralot representative will perform steps on the Intralot system that prepares the COAMs for the decommission. Once the steps are complete, Intralot will notify the MLH the machines have been decommissioned.

3. Disconnect decommissioned COAMs from the site controller.

Keep COAMs connected

To ensure accurate reporting of financial data to the Central Accounting System, the Georgia Lottery Corporation (GLC) says it is imperative the Location License Holders (LLHs) ensure all equipment remains connected to the site controller and powered up at all times.

The GLC maintains a record of those LLHs that are repeat offenders of failing to ensure the continuous connectivity and operation of Class B COAMs.

Failure to comply with these procedures may result in fines up to $50,000, suspension and/or revocation of the license.
