

IAAP Division 15 is on LinkedIn

Dear members, we are pleased to announce that from now on you can follow us on LinkedIn and get to know the latest news of the division, opportunities for collaboration, connect with division members, share achievement and members stories!

<https://www.linkedin.com/company/iaap-division-15>

I am would like to thank our new Secretary of Communication Tia Kleiner who is managing our new page.

IAAP Division 15

33 followers

2w •

Welcome to the Official LinkedIn Home of Division 15 of the IAAP!

Follow us for expert insights, career development tips, and the latest in ...see more

Welcome to the official LinkedIn account for the Students and Early Career Psychologists Division (Division 15) of the International Association of Applied Psychology (IAAP)!

Welcome to our new Board Members

We would like to thank our new Boars members for joining Division 15 we are truly excited to collaborate with them !

New Secretary of Communications

Tia Kleiner

York University, Canada

Tia recently graduated summa cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from York University, Canada. During her time there, she worked in various psychology research labs, cultivating a passion for psychological research. Her undergraduate thesis, "Unmasking the Self: How COVID-19 Changed the Way We See Ourselves," earned the Ivana Guglietti Kelly Prize for Excellence in Qualitative Research. She presented her research at the IAAP's Early Career Marathon and now volunteers with Division 12 and Division 15 of the IAAP. Tia is thrilled about her new role as Secretary of Communication for Division 15 at the IAAP, where she is eager to foster a growing community of psychology students worldwide. Her current research interests are diverse, encompassing cooperation, morality, and identity.

New Second Vice President

Kerry-aman Kaur Fisher

Arden University, United Kingdom

Kerry, a British Master's student at Arden University, embarked on her academic journey as a mature student while concurrently working for the NHS during the COVID-19 pandemic. Pursuing a Masters in Psychology, her career aspiration is to become a Forensic Psychologist. Despite holding a First-Class Honours BA in Criminology and Psychology, she is completing a Conversion Master's in Psychology due to not having undertaken an accredited British Psychology Society undergraduate course.

Her primary academic interests revolve around Personality Disorders and their intersection with individuals involved in or impacted by the Criminal Justice System. Having identified a research gap during her undergraduate course, Kerry aims to further explore this topic and disseminate her findings to both the academic community and a broader audience. Post-Masters, Kerry intends to elevate her career prospects by pursuing a PhD in Forensic Psychology, driven by her lifelong passion for criminal justice and her desire to effect positive change within the field of psychology.

She has been actively involved in university life volunteering her time as a lecturing assistant as well as be involved in real-life volunteer research projects within both Criminology and Psychology. She was a student representative for each respective department collating information from students to help make improvements whilst ensuring the student voice was heard. Active engagement characterises Kerry's involvement in professional societies, including the British Psychology Society and the British Society for Criminology. She was an active member of the British Psychology Society's Student Committee as the EFPSA representative for the UK and served on the Scientific Committee for the European Congress of Psychology 2023.

Leveraging her previous experiences, Kerry aims to utilise her knowledge to enhance the visibility and promotion of IAAP, while fostering stronger communication and partnerships with other organisations to maximise IAAP's global impact on student communities.