NETWORK NOTEBOOK

IN THIS ISSUE

The big news is the DIRECTORY, all new since 1984. It combines the pervasive power of DB3 with the beauty of laser-written Word Perfect. Not only does it contain name, address & Bitnet, but there are cross-referenced lists by country, US state, discipline & keyword. 1 caution: we've included for completeness all those who've ever been members since 1985 so some entries may be out of date.

Other stuff in this issue are the latest (& last) news on the SUNBELT conference this Feb in San Diego, the sunspot where brown-nosing & red-necking is a way of life. We go back to the future, celebrating 2 certified classic network analysts (no, we don't mean the monastery data!) & talking about future INSNA possibilities. And if you want to write a classic paper, Charles Jones tells you how to search INSNA abstracts on disk with Nota Bene & get all the cites you'll ever need. Of course, there's the usual motley assortment of gossip, meeting stuff, computer tips, et al.

 RENEWAL TIME *****

It costs over $1 to chase people to renew with a reminder letter. The morale cost is even higher to the poor wretches who put this thing out. SO RENEW NOW, WITH THE FORM ENCLOSED WITH THIS ISSUE. We regret the price rise to $18. It's the 1st in a few years & will just about cover the deficit we're running. And shop smart: if you use our new 3 year renewal, you'll avoid future price rise. Students get an even better deal: a half-price loss leader.

HAVE YOU TAKEN A LIBRARIAN TO LUNCH RECENTLY?

The best way to avoid INSNA price hikes is to encourage libraries to subscribe at high institutional rates ($30 in our case). Most journals, including SOCIAL NETWORKS, thrive on library subs. INSNA has gained about 20 such subs (including some hi-prestige places), so it can be done. For every additional 25 subs, we can keep individual sub costs down by $1. Robin Inskip, INSNA's librarian-in-residence, has designed a letter aimed at the folks who order journals for libraries. A copy has been enclosed with this mailing. All you have to do is send it to the appropriate person at your library(ies). An endorsing cover letter from you accompanying it usually does wonders, as most libraries have a policy of responding to faculty pleas.

KEY NODES IN THE INSNA HQ SUPER-NODE

Lots of folks worked hard, smart & long to get this issue out. VICENTE ESPINOZA was our original designer: laying out the original specs of our new DB3+ membership database. PAT PARISI-SMITH worked carefully and creatively moving our old Cornerstone database onto DB3. Both Pat & SCOT WORTLEY kept the enterprise going, handling queries, entering new memberships & chasing hot prospects. DAVID HILLOCK took the database, cleaned it up, made it do tricks, and turned it into our Word Perfect-based Directory. ROBIN INSKIP sweated out marketing & laser printing. Throughout, ANTONIA MAUGHN watched our accounts, SUSAN DENTELBECK got issues out, CYNDI ROTTENBERG wrote macros & organized things. INSNA is so good (& so cheap) because all these folks are extraordinarily talented, conscientious & nice. (Which has always been true: every former INSNA Associate is now well-employed.) Throughout, BARRY WELLMAN has acted as ringmaster/kibitzer (2 contradictory roles), & worrier about grand strategy & petty details (2 necessarily complementary roles).

PERSONAL NETWORK QUESTIONNAIRE FILE

The WORK & WELL-BEING study of LONG-STAY PATIENTS IN AN ACUTE CARE HOSPITAL has contributed a set of 5 questionnaires to INSNA's growing cumulative file. They tap social networks, social behaviour skills, support, physical & mental health. INFO from Victor Marshall, Behavioural Science, U Toronto, Toronto Canada M5S 1A8 Tel: 416-978-6744.

CALLS FOR SUPPORT

From L'Union des Associations Internationales: We are exploring the possibility of using techniques of network analysis to explore our database with a view to representing segments of it as network maps. Our difficulty is that we are dealing with 10K-30K nodes (organizations + 'world problems'). So we can also use help in determining how the total map could best be segmented into the 'pages' of an 'atlas', namely by criteria of connectivity or common subject focus.

My current sense of cost-effective feasibility is to piggy-back on various forms of software such as CAD, social network analysis or circuit board design. Our specific problems:

1. To find a package will allow us to import our data even though it consists of a network of relationships between conceptual entities.
2. To find a suitable algorithm to distribute our data over a surface in such a way as to ensure a minimum of line crossings amongst the elements of the networks. Or, in the absence of an elegant solution, to perform a computer assisted redistribution of the data by manual massaging in an interactive mode.
3. To move towards being able to massage any given map into a pattern which is meaningful: computer-assisted pattern forming.

I hope to hear from those who have similar problems. I am planning to visit the USA 1/88 & would appreciate face-to-face or telephone discussions.

[Edited from a letter from Anthony J N Judge, Secretariat General, Union des Associations Internationales, Rue Washington 40, 1050 Bruxelles, Belgique. Tel: (02)-640-41-09, 640-18-08. Telex: 65080 INAC B.

From Stanley Wasserman: I spent 4 weeks at the U Michigan, Ann Arbor, teaching the Network Analysis course at the Summer Program in Quantitative Methods at ICPSR. Hank Heitowit, the Director of the Summer Program, has made a commitment to the course & plans to offer it for at least the next 2 years. The course is a unique opportunity for students & researchers to learn the latest network methodology in a very good environment.

This summer, I had 7-10 students for the duration of the course. I enjoyed the experience -- ICPSR has great resources, especially computers. I do not think that I will return next year, however -- 4 weeks is too long to go without seeing my family. So we will be looking for an instructor for next year.

Interested instructors contact Stanley at Psychology Dept, U Illinois, 603 E. Daniel St, Champaign IL 61820. Those who want to take the course should get in touch directly with Hank Heitowit, ICPSR, U Michigan, Ann Arbor.

From Barry Wellman: I've been asked by the ANNUAL REVIEW OF SOCIOLOGY to do a review article on urban social relations. Please send me your papers (conference, working papers as well as publication) as well as pertinent info. about your books (assuming you can't spare a copy). In return I shall try to make you (in)famous. I need this material by 1 April 88, preferably. Address: Ctr for Urban & Community Studies, Univ of Toronto, 455 Spadina Ave, Room 426, Toronto Canada M5S 1A1.

IF YOU EDIT THIS MAGAZINE FOR FREE, YOU GET TO HYPE YOUR OWN BOOK

Years in the making, a score of mega-stars, & a fuchsia cover! Yes, folks, it should be out in January, 1988: the long-awaited (& longer-promised) SOCIAL STRUCTURES: A NETWORK APPROACH, edited by Barry Wellman & S.D. Berkowitz. [Cambridge U Press, c530 pp., $19.95 pb, $65 hb.]

What's in it? A score of articles, all profound, most witty, & almost all original. They've been chosen to give a sense of a structural/network analytic approach to looking at social issues. CONTENTS:

I. Thinking Structurally

"Studying social structures," Barry Wellman & S.D. Berkowitz

"Structural analysis: from method & metaphor to theory & substance," Barry Wellman

"Understanding simple social structure: kinship units and ties," Nancy Howell

"The duality of persons and groups," Ronald Breiger

"The relational basis of attitudes," Bonnie Erickson

II. Communities

"Networks as personal communities," Barry Wellman, Peter Carrington & Alan Hall

"Work & community in industrializing India," Leslie Howard

"Relations of production & class rule: the hidden basis of patron-clientage," Y. Michal Bodemann

III. Markets

"Varieties of markets," Harrison White

"Markets & market-areas: some preliminary formulations," S.D. Berkowitz

"Form & substance in the analysis of the world economy," Harriet Friedmann

IV. Social Change

"Misreading, then rereading, 19th century social change," Charles Tilly

"Structural location & ideological divergence: Jewish Marxist intellectuals in turn-of-the-century Russia," Robert Brym

"Cites & fights: material entailment analysis of the 18th century chemical revolution," Douglas White & H. Gilman McCann

V. Social Mobility

"Collective mobility & the persistence of dynasties," Lorne Tepperman

"Social networks & efficient resource allocation: computer models of job vacancy allocation thru contacts," John Delany

"Occupational mobility: a structural model," Joel Levine & John Spadaro

"Toward a formal structural sociology," S.D. Berkowitz

STRUCTURAL-DENIMISM?

"Espirit Jeans-A Modern Concept: Because denim & jeanswear are such social equalizers today you don't necessarily need silks & satins to be elegant. Elegance is now, curiously enough, anti-fashion & anti-luxury. This new elegance has become a de-classification process that puts what you can do--your style & abilities far ahead of what you can afford. Now you don't have to be rich to be elegant." [The complete ad text in {US} VOGUE, 9/87].

FRENCH SOCIOLOGISTS HAVE MORE FUN

In his latest novel, [Jean Dutourd, LE SEMINAIRE DE BORDEAUX, Flammarion, Fr85, 318p.] has concentrated his fire on 1 of the scared cows of the 5th Republic, the CNRS...& on a group of young sociologists who labour earnestly on monographs with titles like The Sexual Life of Artisans in the Feather Trade at Grand Caillou in the 18th Century or Dechristianisation in the Region of Poitou-Charente Between 1936 & 1965. Promiscuity being the norm among this happy band of research workers, there is a frequent exchanging of partners....It is not often that I come across a novel that is both so funny & so touching in such finely balanced proportions." [from Erik De Mauny's FINANCIAL TIMES review, 18 July 87].

EXCHANGE THEORY: THE LATEST IN MORAL VS MATERIAL REWARDS

CHINA DAILY reporter found unusually clean restrooms in Canton's China Hotel. He noted that some foreign tourists tipped the attendant who was "forever smiling & ready to help. Should we expect every hotel staff & people in the service industry to smile as lovers do to each other? And in return for nothing? I don't think so." [from TORONTO STAR 31 July 87].

STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS KEEPS REARING ITS DISCONCERTING HEAD

"The focus on explained variance has had a major effect on the choice of problems to study within sociology. To explain the variance in a dependent variable, there must be variance in both the independent & dependent variables. This need for variance in the variables under study has led researchers to focus on problems addressable with data sets that contain variation in the variables of interest. In most instances, this variation occurs at the individual level, & the subject of analysis has been interindividual differences in a dependent variable. Many, if not most fundamental sociological questions, however, involve macrolevel, structural forces in which there is little or no variation. These problems cannot be addressed thru this type of analysis.

"Why has the analysis of interindividual differences or variation become so predominant in social research. The answer lies in the transfer of methodological knowledge where statistical methods for analyzing variance were originally developed. In genetics, however, the analysis of variation was motivated by the major substantive concerns of the field...Lieberson rightly claims that the questions in much social research are not driving the analysis; instead, the reverse is frequently true. Thus an often useful tool now diverts attention from the more fundamental substantive issues, many of which are not naturally formulated in terms of variation....

"The preoccupation with explaining variance has led researchers to focus largely on accounting for interindividual differences, but many of the questions of central importance in sociology concern the functioning of larger collectivities. Thus there has been a tendency for sociologists to confuse levels of analysis & to argue that the analysis of associations at the individual, or micro, level can inform us about processes operating at a higher level. But...observations of associations at the micro level cannot be used to infer that similar associations exist at a macro level, just as observations of associations at a macro level do not indicate that similar associations will be found at the micro level." [From Burton Singer & Margaret Mooney Marini, "Advancing Social Research: An Essay Based on Stanley Lieberson's Making It Count," SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY 1987, 380-81.]

PUBLISHING OPPORTUNITY

RESEARCH ON SOCIAL POLICY: CRITICAL, HISTORICAL & CONTEMPORARY PERSPECTIVES, a new JAI Pr annual, is soliciting papers & proposals. It wants historical as well as contemporary stuff, & papers stressing 'unconventional' interpretations of social policies (e.g., Marxist, phenomenology, psycho-history, critical theory, underdevelopment, internal colonialism). The is publishing papers on social policies as developed by elite decision-makers in states, missions, foundations, communities & international political bodies. Next paper deadline 30 June 88. Info: John Stanfield II, Editor, Soc Dept, PO Box 1965, Yale Station, New Haven CT 06520.

ELIHU KATZ GETS WHAT HE DESERVES

Katz (Soc, Hebrew U) is the 1987 winner of Teleglobe Canada's $50K Marshall McLuhan Prize for outstanding international achievement in the field of communications. Among his achievements, the awards committee noted the 1955 PERSONAL INFLUENCE (with Paul Lazarsfeld) which "called attention to the meshing of communications networks; how the networks of personal communications interpenetrates with the flow of mass communication. By exploring the conditions under which mass media are (& are not) effective agencies of change, Katz succeed in demonstrating that the role of the individual cannot be perceived as a passive 1, but rather as a generator & object of influence in the communications process.

WHERE DO WE FIT IN?

"[Galtung (1981) has] identified 4 predominant intellectual styles. The SAXONIC style, dominant in the major Anglo-Saxon centres (Great Britain & the USA), is very strong in description (proposition production), weak in explanation (theory formation), weak in paradigm analysis (analysis & evaluation of the foundations of its scientific endeavours), & strong in commentary on other intellectuals (analysing & evaluating their paradigms, propositions & theories). The TEUTONIC & GALLIC styles are weak in description, very strong in explanation, & strong in paradigm analysis & commentary. [The 4th, NIP-PONIC, style is not discussed in this paper.]

"The major distinctions between styles centre around orientation to theory formation & utilisation of empirical data. The Saxonic style is proposition oriented & less ambitious concerning theory formation. The proponents of the Teutonic style are system builders, while the proponents of the Gallic style build their theory with linguistic skills as a hammock around 2 counterpoised poles. The Teutonic style uses data as plaster on atheoretical pyramid, while the Gallic style considers them as somewhat irrelevant for theoretical endeavours, altho worthwhile collecting as a hobby. The Saxonic style thrives on data. It collects, documents & interprets: its American version is primarily interested in statistical data, its British counterpart in exact documentation. Real debates exist only in the Saxonic style, as [the] Teutonic & Gallic styles believe in vehement monologues of different types." [from Veronica STOLTE-HEISKANEN, "The Role of Centre-Periphery Relations in the Utilisation of the Social Sciences." INTERNATIONAL SOCIOLOGY 2 (2):189-203.]

NETWORK THERAPISTS GET CONNECTED

INSNA member DAVID TRIMBLE has been working hard forging links among network therapists. He's editing a nice informal NETLETTER, full of news, abstracts & meeting info. "WHY DOES THE GENERAL WHO ALWAYS LOSES THE BATTLE REMAIN IN COMMAND?"

So asks a recent letter in the Chinese daily, ECONOMIC INFORMATION. The author points to the example of a factory chief who caused whatever business he ran to lose money. Instead of being demoted, he was transferred to another top job.

The reason given: "A vast network of connections thru which old schoolmates, friends & colleagues promoted & protected each other & for which maintaining good relations was much more important than appointing competent people. The factory chiefs are not only battling networks of old cadres & interfering bureaucrats but also operating in a market besieged by shortages & price fluctuations over which they have no control." [from Mark O'Neill's Reuter story in the TORONTO GLOBE & MAIL 20 Aug 87].

YES, BUT CAN SHE GET TENURE?

"Life in America is not so difficult. There any young man can become an assistant professor." German physicist Arnold Sommerfeld in the 1920s as quoted by I.I. Rabi in John Rigden, RABI: SCIENTIST AND CITIZEN [NY: Basic Books, 1986?].

OF SPIES AND NETWORKS, FRIENDS AND COUNTRIES

"Speaking of his [life] in the 1860s as [a member of the Apostle secret society, Henry] Sidgwick said: 'No part of my life at Cambridge was so real to me as the Saturday evenings on which the apostolic debates were held; and the tie of attachment to the society is much the strongest corporate bond which I have known in life.'"

[The tradition continued with Anthony Blunt, Apostle in the 1930s, KGB agent & later, the Queen's art curator]. "When, according to Goronwy Rees, Blunt tried to dissuade him from telling MI5 that he suspected [Guy] Burgess of being an agent, Blunt quoted E.M. Forster's famous aphorism: that faced with a choice, he hoped he would have the guts to betray his country rather than his friends. Rees says that he replied that the antithesis was false -- 1's country was a dense network of individual & social relationships in which loyalty to 1 particular person formed only a single strand....Rees forgot, however, the context of Forster's aphorism. Forster prefaced it by writing, 'Personal relations are despised to-day...& we are urged to get rid of them, & to dedicate ourselves to some movement or cause instead. I hate the idea of causes.'" [Noel Annan, "Et tu, Anthony," NEW YORK REVIEW OF BOOKS 22 Oct 87].

DID MONTAIGNE INFLUENCE DURKHEIM & SIMMEL?

"Starobinski organizes his book around 7 great themes that Montaigne felt he must examine & somehow resolve, [including] friendship & the need for an audience....Montaigne had once had an incomparable intimacy with [Etienne] La Boétie, an intimacy that isolated them from the deceptive world, a 'complete fusion of wills,' a stable union of souls and self-revelation ('He saw for me, and I saw for him')...."

"Starobinski begins his 3d chapter with Montaigne's announced detestation of dependence, of being obliged to others out of favor or gratitude, or worse, being subject to their judgement. But when he withdraws to self-sufficiency, Montaigne finds that 'others' creep back in; he needs them if only to prevent him from lying to himself....Moreover, he recognizes that there is a difference between unreasoned subjection to 1's family or local community & solidarity with wider communities -- solidarity that forms a 'universal bond': 'I consider all men my compatriots.' With these broader views of self & community, Montaigne can go back to local relations. Obligation, he decides, need not be subjection; it can be mutual so long as it is based on the link of truthful speech.

"Starobinski concludes 'The relation to others' with a discussion of Montaigne's delight in triads & in 3-part structures..." From Natalie Zemon Davis' New York Review of Books review of Jean Starobinski, MONTAIGNE IN MOTION (U Chicago Pr, 1987?).

YOU ARE NOT ALONE

43% of the top 30 writers examined annually for 15 years at the U Iowa Writer's Workshop have suffered some degree of manic-depressive illness. [Source: Toronto GLOBE & MAIL 18 July 87]. But which came 1st, writing or m-d?

TRANSITIVITY IN HOLLYWOOD

"Status is demonstrated by a private bathroom & an anteroom with 2 secretaries. Less obviously, it is apparent in 1's telephone system. 'You get hi marks if there are people on your buzzer who are both above & below you,' said Laurence Mark, a former VP of production at both Paramount & Fox. 'It is important to be able to buzz up, not just buzz down.'" [Aljean Harmetz, "The Hollywood Office Plays a Starring Role," NY TIMES 5 Nov 87].

CHIMPS, CATASTROPHES & CONNECTIONS--A GOULD/GOODALLIAN VIEW

"The current state of a chimpanzee society cannot be assessed by accumulating the ordinary, predictable events of daily life (if so, the experimentalist's procedure of occasional random sampling might suffice). Major features are consequences of rare large-scale events (the analogues of war, famine & pestilence in our lives) -- true historical particulars that can only be appreciated by watching, not predicted from theory. Goodall [shows], for example, how much about group size, composition & dynamics of the Gombe chimpanzees can be explained by 3 particular events: a polio outbreak in 1966 leading to 6 deaths & 6 crippings; the split of her community [sic] into 2 groups during 1970-1972, & the later annihilation of 1 by males of the other; & the killing & cannibalism of up to 10 infants by 1 female & her adult daughter following their 'discovery' of this food source in 1974." [From Stephen Jay Gould's review of Jane Goodall's THE CHIMPANZEES OF GOMBE: PATTERNS OF BEHAVIOR. NY REVIEW, 25 June 87]

FROM PROPER BOSTONIANS TO SAMMY GLICK

"At 1 time, the underwriters' quarters at 1 of NY's prestige firms, 1st Boston, was known as the House of Lords. The trading desks were the House of Commons. However, the gentlemanly side of the business did not survive the inflationary 1970s & that decade's switch to new ways of borrowing via quickie prospectuses, shelf registrations & bought deals. Suddenly, it was the traders who were making the big profits & the decisions. The underwriters' authority had rested on a social kinship with their blue-chip clients & an ability to syndicate stocks & bonds to investors. But, by the early 1980s, such skills were passé." [Peter Cook, TORONTO GLOBE & MAIL 12 Dec 87].

MEETING CALENDAR

SUNBELT SOCIAL NETWORK CONFERENCE, San Diego, 11-14 Feb 1988

The most fantastic conference of the year is coming up soon, sponsored by INSNA. Charles Kadushin is the keynote speaker in the late afternoon of Thursday, February 11. Ever the optimist, Charles will speak on "The Next Ten Years".

To get to important matters 1st, temperature should be 75-85° daytimes, but with cool evenings. The hotel is on beautiful Mission Bay, with wind surfing (Lin Freeman will demo), swimming, & nearby tennis/golf.

The sessions and chairs are:

Gender, Ethnicity and Aging: Gary Hurd, 1720 East Garry Avenue, Suite 109, Santa Ana, CA 92705, (714) 261-6320 (answering service) 432-7138 (home)

Social Support: Jeffrey C. Salloway, Department of Psychology, Rush Medical College, 1753 W. Congress, Chicago, IL 60612, (312) 942-6050

Health Care Delivery: Martha Ann Carey, 11 Hilly Field Lane, Westport, CT 06880, (203) 226-7053
Biological Networks: Gregory B. Pollack, W.K. Kellogg Biological Station, Michigan State University, 3700 Gull Lake Drive, Hickory Corners, MI 49060-9516, (313) 995-9326

near Sea World, a great Zoo, the airport, shops & restaurants. Rates per nite: $72 for single; $76, double; $80, triples, $84, quads plus 7 percent occupancy tax. To reserve, send first night's deposit and tax directly to the hotel, check made out to "Bahia Resort Hotel". Mention that you are with the Sunbelt Social Network group in order to get this special rate. This special rate is also good 3 days before & after the conference. Last day for special rate, Jan 12.

Conference Registration: Pre-conference registration fee (till Jan 22) is $35 for INSNA members, $40 for nonmembers, $20 for students. Reg at the conference is $40 for members, $45 for nonmembers, $25 for students. In absentia registration is $10 for which the registrant receives the conference program and abstracts. In absentia registrants may place a paper in absentia on the program and in the abstracts by submitting to Eugene Johnsen an abstract of up to 200 words by Jan 22. 1st night buffet dinner, $23. Stanley Wasserman's special tutorial, $45. Send check, money order, etc. for all this to Sunbelt Social Network Conference, Dept of Sociology, Univ of California, Irvine CA 92717. Make checks out to "Sunbelt Social Network Conference". Registrants should give their full name, professional affiliation, address & phone number.

Time: Feb 11-14, (Thurs afternoon through Sunday noon) Registration starts, early afternoon, Feb 11. Stanley Wasserman's Networks Survey Tutorial starts early afternoon, Thurs, Feb 11 (2 hours, with additional 2 hour periods on Fri and Sat). Keynote address by Charles Kadushin in early evening; cocktail hour & buffet dinner follow. Regular sessions begin Fri morning, 0830/0900, running to 1200. Afternoon sessions normally 1600-1900. 1200-1600 essentially kept open for other activities, especially informal poolside networking.

Inquiries about the program should be addressed to Eugene C. Johnsen Mathematics, U of California, Santa Barbara, CA 93106, 805-961-2060 (office), 805-961-2171 (messages). [EGNCJSN at SBITP.BITNET].

Proposed Sunbelt Slogan: "While virtue may be its own reward, it pays to belong to the right network."

SOCIAL NETWORK THERAPY COURSE, Toronto, 21-22 Jan 88

Organized by Community Occupational Therapy Associates. The approach uses interventions designed to strengthen supportive relationships within an existing network & also to enlarge networks. The goal is to contribute to the health & community adjustment of the psychiatrically disabled. Interventions include Network Construction (designed to help clients add to small, overburdened networks or replace unhealthy 1s); Network Coaching (on improving network relations, assistance with problem-solving, increased competence in social skills); Network Sessions (meetings of people who have key relationships with an individual or family for concrete problem-solving & expression of feelings). Course personnel include Don Wasylenki, Benjamin Gottlieb, Anne Coppard & Gerald Erickson. $150. INFO: Anne Coppard, COTA, 3101 Bathurst St, Suite 200, Toronto, Canada M6A 2A6. Tel: 416-785-8797.

AMERICAN ORTHOPSYCHIATRIC ASSOC, 28-29 March, San Francisco

Conference includes a half-day workshop: "Current Practice in Network Intervention" with Carolyn Atneave, Anne Coppard, Gerald Erickson, Elizabeth Hemley-van der Velden & Paul Ruff. Workshop will provide an overview of network intervention in mental health practice in Canada, USA & Scandinavia. Applications include chronic mental illness, adolescent problems & crisis intervention.

PEACE THRU EDUCATION CONFERENCE, 21-24 April 88, Dallas

Workshops on conflict resolution, servant leadership, global education, world core curriculum, led by INSNA member (& former UN official) Robert Muller. Fees: $275. Info: Robert Muller School, 6005 Royal Oak Drive, Arlington Texas 76016.

IOWA WORKSHOP ON PERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS, U of Iowa, Iowa City, 20-22 May 88

Primarily for grad students, with preference given to members of the Iowa Network on Personal Relationships. Deals with different aspects of accounts, ruminations & editorializing in relationships. workshop leaders include John Harvey, Ann Weber, Cathy Surra & possibly Charles Antaki. Cost: c$140. INFO: Steve Duck, Communic St, U Iowa, Iowa City IA 52242

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SOCIAL SCIENCE METHODOLOGY, Dubrovnik, 30 May-3 June 88

Topics include general methods, research design, operationalization, data collection, sampling, measurement, scaling, statistical data analysis, software, modelling & simulation. Info: Anuska Ferligoj, Organizing Committee, Univerza Edvarda Kardlja, Faculty of Sociology, research Institute, 61000 Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, Kardeljeva ploščad 5. Tel: (061)-341-461.

Social Networks session at CANADIAN SOCIOLOGY & ANTHROPOLOGY ASSOC, Windsor Ont, 4 June 88

This session will consist of papers that apply social network analysis to the study of a substantive problem in sociology or anthropology, or that contribute to the development of social network theory or methodology. Info: Peter Carrington, Soc, U Waterloo, Waterloo, Ont, Canada N2L 3G1.

INTERNATIONAL PSYCHOSYNTHESIS CONFERENCE, Venice & Sesto Pusteria, 30 June-4 July 88

Presents the latest developments & applications: self-realization, education, health, psychotherapy, social & international relations, organizational development. Mostly in the beautiful Dolomites. Cost (without r&b): L.260K. Info from INSNA member Alexis DuPont DeBie or Centro Studi Di Psicossintesi "R. Assagoli", Piazza Madonna 7, 501 23 Firenze.

ALL PURPOSE COMMENTS TO BE USED AT THE SUNBELT CONFERENCE

1. "Your discussion of X includes the dimensions of Y and Z. You can't say one is more important than the other because they are all related."
 2. "Your discussion ignores the historical aspect of X (and Y and Z). X is not an ahistorical construct. Rather, it is contingent on the particular conjuncture of class [gender, cultural, etc.] forces at the time."
 3. "X, Y and Z are not globally uniform processes. Case I went from A to B while Case II went from C to D. In Case I, X was a mediator, while in Case II, X was an outcome. In both cases, X, Y and Z also had internal cleavages."
 4. "X, Y and Z are treated in your discussion as if they were individualistic variables when everyone knows they are structural". [See Singer & Marini's more sophisticated formulation of this in this section.]
 5. "Your empirical research is invalid because it is atheoretical. It inherently cannot account for the multitudinous interactions among all the fuzzily-defined constructs."
 6. "Your theoretical constructs are utopian because they contain no referent to systematically gathered and evaluated empirical evidence."
 7. "You have talked about epistemology & ontology. What you really ought to do is the opposite."

WHAT IS TO BE DONE? -- THE NEXT 10 YEARS OF INSNA

This is the end of the decade: It completes our 10th volume (& our 11th year). While computer shops mythically start in a garage, INSNA started in Wellman's hip-pocket. It's been run that way ever since, informally, casually & seriously. In the past 10 years, network analysis has developed from a metaphor, dream and cult into a proto-paradigm. We've come up with principles, methodological practices -- in fieldwork, surveys, data-handling, computation and statistics -- and a large lore of substantive findings. Connections & Social Networks have become established, and a bunch of good textbooks & readers now instruct initiates & the unwashed in the faith. We've moved from being scattered pockets of graduate students & rebellious faculty to central positions in sociology and respectability in the other social sciences. In addition to overt network analysis, a network cum structuralist sensibility has come to permeate discourse.

I immodestly think INSNA has played an important role in this work. But with advancing age, comes growth or rigor mortis. It's time to restructure, renew and develop: network analysis in general and INSNA in particular. Some ideas that have floated around:

1. Developing smaller networks within countries, disciplines and interest groups. The British Drizzlebelt and the French AFARS are a beginning here. But why couldn't similar things happen with the corporate interlockers or the social workers, to pick 2 examples at semi-random.

2. Expanding our base. Right now, we are big (in numbers & influence) in North America & sociology. The former strong base in British anthropology has shrunk. Other bases in other disciplines need to develop. Alliances should be formed with like-minded groups, such as empirically-minded world-systems analysts, organizational agency analysts, or kinship analysts. There are lots of folks out there doing good structural analytic work who have lots of affinity with networkers, but don't quite see themselves as network analysts. Both we and they lose badly thru lack of contact.

3. Linking with practitioners. A variety of folks are trying to apply network principles to the real world. Among the variety of things I've heard of are: "social network therapy" showing chronic schizophrenics how to create enduring relationships and helping neurotics to resolve relational difficulties; management consulting to identify clusters of communication and power within organizations; law enforcement efforts to identify criminal conspiracies; personnel development to train executives how to develop and use ties; network training for job search; networking courses to develop interpersonal skills for finding friends and lovers. Most such efforts treat networks as metaphors or use the most rudimentary concepts. The practitioners would benefit from the academic tools; the academics would benefit from the real world feedback and the consulting bucks.

4. We face the continuing dilemmas of solidifying into a church, hiving off into a sect, or diffusing into vacuousness. We need the dynamism of new ideas & the theoretical development of existing ideas. It's time to go beyond neat insights & fancy methods. The time of easy victories is past, when we snuck up on a pack of social sciences who were talking about social structure but practicing individualistic, culturological analysis. For starters, we must consolidate our theoretical base and evaluate the analytic utility of various measures. To avoid stale in-groupiness, we need to develop entry points to make our work more accessible to broader masses of scholars as well as to practitioners.

5. We need to be more intellectually entrepreneurial. What we do, we do well: CONNECTIONS (says I immodestly), SOCIAL NETWORKS, the Sunbelt, even our T-shirts. But we could use summer training institutes (such as the 1 Stan Wasserman has experimented with), an active publications series, more widely distributed databases, better guides to software, more miniconferences. One growing resource is our textbase of more than 1,000 abstracts (see Charles Jones' note in this issue). It can be easily used to turn out focused bibliographies on many topics from social support to corporate interlocks (come to think of it, aren't interlocks really social support for the banks? -- ask Mintz & Schwartz).

6. On a more parochial level, we need to think about INSNA. The Advisory Board has more or less drifted along in its original composition. Yet 10 years ago the current chairman of the Columbia Soc dept was a grad student. (OK, so Ron is precocious -- the point still holds.) At the same time, I've reached my limit. Although there's lots more that should be done, I can't do anymore, and after founding & running INSNA for 10 years, I feel I've done enough. It's time to play the transition game.

So I've asked a committee to recommend where to go from here. They'll report to the membership at the Sunbelt & thru CONNECTIONS. One crucial matter: volunteers for editorial, publishing, conferencing, organizing, recruiting, linkage-building, coordinating work. DEFINING INTIMACY

The sworn social contract between the producer Joseph Papp and the late choreographer/director Michael Bennett:

Being sound in mind and body and pure in heart, will you solemnly vow, promise, swear, pledge and affirm to perform all the duties, obligations, expectations, as they are construed and understood to apply to the term "friendship" such as loyalty, fealty, mutual assistance, honesty, truthfulness and trust in all dealings, arrangements, both verbal and written, both spoken and unspoken, both at home and abroad, in all companies, at all hours, for all times, to set a shining example of integrity in human affairs, in contradistinction and toward the obliteration of backbiting, undermining, innuendo, opportunism, greed, the devil's larder of subtle seductions preying on man's weakness for aggrandizement at the expense and over the corpus of his fellow.

Be it understood and acknowledged that this signature, though set down in ink, shall be as binding as the power in a blood knot, and whosoever shall attempt to sever or untie it shall suffer the penalty of the damned and remain forever in a dark and empty theater [Joseph Papp, "Remembering Michael Bennett," NY TIMES 12 July 87]

WOMEN FITTER TO BE TIED

"I find women to be much more friendly & helpful with both men & women [as business managers]. They develop networks in ways men don't." [Ronald Blake, Mngmnt St, York U, Canada, quoted in TORONTO GLOBE & MAIL, 8 Aug 87].

CONSPICUOUS CONSUMPTION NEVER EXTENDED TO HARVARD WIVES

"A Harvard legend tells of [Torsten] Veblen's being invited to the university by President... Lowell to be considered for an appointment as a member of the department of economics. After being entertained by fellow economists, he had a last night dinner with Lowell, who used the occasion to bring up, in a suitably careful way, Veblen's most noted academic drawback, which was then being much discussed.

"'You know, Dr. Veblen, if you come here, some of our professors will be a little nervous about their wives.'

"To which Veblen is said to have replied 'They need not worry; I have seen their wives.'

"There is, I believe, no truth to the story."

John Kenneth Galbraith, ECONOMICS IN PERSPECTIVE, as quoted by Robert Heilbroner, NY Review of Books, 5 Nov 87.

CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED & DISCUSSED

Two network papers have gotten their just reward, picked by CURRENT CONTENTS as an oft-mentioned "citation classic". With that honour, each author gets to tell how the piece got written & what's happened since. Here's what they had to say in CC:

JOHN BARNES' "Class and committees in a Norwegian island parish." [HUMAN RELATIONS 7 (1954): 39-58].

"I spent 1952 and part of 1953 in western Norway, carrying out what I initially perceived as a 'community study.' I soon discovered that although the people I worked with had the cultural values of a 'community,' their social structure was quite unlike the paradigmatic gemeinschaft. Their social world had a abundance of formal organizations, but most individuals appeared to make decisions with reference to personal contacts that often cut across organizational boundaries. It tried to capture this configuration with the label 'network' and applied it to the class system, one of the foci of my inquiries.

"When I returned to Manchester, England, I used the term in the first paper I wrote on my research. Then I most to the London School of Economics and found that Elizabeth Bott was grappling with somewhat the same pattern of relations in her work on married couples. Neither her findings nor mine attracted much attention at the time. Other inquiries with the social network as their central analytical tool followed, notably those inspired by Clyde Mitchell. These made a great impact on micro-sociology, and Bott's book [Family & Social Network] and my paper came back into currency. There is now a flourishing specialty of network analysis that has its own journal, SOCIAL NETWORKS; a professional organization, the International Network for Social Network Analysis; and introductory textbooks (e.g. S.D. Berkowitz, An Introduction to Structural Analysis & R.S. Burt, Toward a Structural Theory of Action).

"My career led me away from Norway and network analysis. I became interested in the sociology of knowledge and, in particular, in the development of specialties in social science. I've tried to keep in touch with network analysts if only as an outsider. I've even been rash enough to tell them what they look like from the outside." [See Connections 6,1 (1983).]

"My paper deals not only with social networks in Norway but also with processes of decision-making. All the instances of citation that I've seen invoke only my comments on networks. I still think that what one might call the 'Duke of Plaza Toro' mode of leadership I observed in some Norwegian contexts merits further analysis, but perhaps I shall have to write another paper to prove my point."

MARK GRANOVETTER, "The strength of weak ties." AMERICAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY 78 (1973):-1360-80.

"Like other mid-1960s Harvard sociology graduate students now identified with the 'social networks' perspective, I was fascinated by Harrison White's lectures. I was especially struck by White's description of work by Rappoport and Horvath ["A study of a large sociogram", BEHAVIORAL SCIENCE 6:279-91, 1961] showing that if you traced a network through the seventh and eighth sociometric choices of junior high students, you reached many more people than when tracing through first and second choices, who tended to choose one another.

"I saw an important underdeveloped theme - that weak ties were crucial for individuals' instrumental needs and for overall social cohesion. This idea was reinforced by my knowledge of analogous physical phenomena: weak hydrogen bonds that hold together large molecules, and weak forces in particle physics. (These physical analogies never found their way into my papers; I saw no obvious general principle common to the social and physical structures and was wary of appearing megalomaniacal.) The clincher came while carrying out interviews for my thesis on how people found jobs: my question about whether the person whose information led to a job was 'a friend' often provoked the rejoinder: 'No, just an acquaintance.'

"I submitted a long, discursive paper, "Alienation reconsidered: the strength of weak ties, including material on social psychology, labor markets, community organization, and anthropology, to the AMERICAN SOCIOLOGICAL REVIEW in August 1969. The crushing reply came in December from two referees apparently chosen for their expertise on 'alienation.' One chided me for making recourse to this apparently chosen for their expertise on 'alienation.' One chided me for making recourse to this concept only because it had become an 'eximious sociological cul-de-sac' (some day I shall look up 'eximious') and concluded that the paper should not be published. [Ed. 'Eximious' not in American Heritage Dictionary, Mark].

"Still a graduate student, I was terribly discouraged. Yet, the paper was very popular and enjoyed a vigorous underground circulation for several years. Wisely dropping 'alienation' from the title, I resubmitted it to the AMERICAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY in 1972. When the paper appeared in May 1973, it provoked a stream of correspondence exceeding my greatest expectations. My revisions for the journal changed the paper in what I have come to think of as a typical way: many interesting detours of the original paper were trimmed out in favor of a tight, logical argument. Though the result was no doubt better in many ways, the original version continued to have its adherents and was itself published in 1982 in CONNECTIONS (vol. 5).

"I think the paper has been widely cited because it appeared at a time of rapidly growing interest in the social network perspective and was one of the few such papers to take a broad theoretical approach. Abstracting away from the content of ties means that there is almost endless sets of relevant topics; moreover, the fundamental argument is extremely simple yet counter-intuitive and paradoxical, thus giving the impression, deserved or not, of a simple, self-evident truth not previously understood. Because I avoided measurement issues, many writers could use my argument to interpret their results without a complex empirical verification procedure. (This may be a case of what my colleague, Stephen Cole, calls the function of 'limited obscurantism.')

"The paper had a second life when discovered in the mid- to late-1970s by the discipline of communications, which interpreted the argument in terms of the 'information-redundancy' of strong-tie-networks. In 1980 Everett Rogers, then president of the International Communications Association, invited me to prepare a paper assessing the empirical status of the weak-ties hypothesis for a special session of the ICA meetings. This paper was published in 1983 in SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY as "The strength of weak ties: a network theory revisited." Interest continues, and serious work on measurement has finally been taken up." [e.g., P. Marsden & K. Campbell, "Measuring tie strength." SOCIAL FORCES 63:482-501, 1984.]"

SMALL ALIEN WORLD CHASTITY DEPT

Barry Markovsky sent along this puzzle. [The original is by "Dr Crypton" in DISCOVER, 10/87].

Suppose an alien matriarchal society with 2 customs: (1) If a husband cheats on his wife, he tells everyone on the planet except her (& no 1 tells her). (2) If a wife learns that her husband has cheated, at midnite she puts a chastity belt on him & puts him on publicly display the next day.

Question: what would be the implications if an Earthling landed & announced that "there's been cheating on this planet"?

Answer: There'd be the chastity-belting of all adulterers on the nth nite, with n being the number of adulterers.

Example: If $n=1$, then the wife who by (1) would know if other adulteries had been committed, would immediately know that her husband had cheated & belt him.

If $n=2$, then everyone except the 2 wronged women knows of 2 adulterers. The 2 women only know of 1 adulterer each -- the other's husband. However when each learns on the next (2d) day that this other husband hasn't been belted, she immediately realizes that her husband also is an adulterer.

Send your analysis for $n=55$ and $n=0$ to the contest editor.

USING CONNECTIONS AS A DATABASE

Charles Jones (Soc, Toronto; on leave in Toulouse, France, 1987-1988.
EARN/BITNET address: CJONES AT FRTOU71, 1987-1988; CJONES AT UTOREPAS; 9/88+)

Since I usually read CONNECTIONS in transit, I can rarely re-locate interesting abstracts, once they have passed from my short term memory. Hence I was definitely interested when the editor announced that CONNECTIONS would be made available in machine readable form, as a set of text files on IBM formatted 5" disks. I had the notion that I could build up my personal data bank of everything ever published in CONNECTIONS and search it for items relevant to my research interests. Humanists do very complex searches of text databases using IBM's SQL. Having no access to SQL, I decided to work with the textbase programme in Nota Bene for which I already had a license.

[CONNECTIONS is available in WordPerfect or generic ASCII versions for $5/issue. First issue available vol 9, # 2, a double issue available on 2 disks or 1 high-density (1.2M disk). Jones worked with the WordPerfect version even though he used a different word processing programme. Ed.]

I used the abstracts as units of analysis, each one occupying about a page of single spaced text, in which information about authors, title and source is not separated from the abstract information. So far as the programme is concerned, the units of analysis are undifferentiated texts of variable length. Nota Bene allows the user to define a variety of markers for delimiting one entry from another. I used a blank line, though I could have used other markers or defined my own. What I wanted to do was to pull out abstracts if they satisfied such criteria as containing (word A or word B) and word C and not word D).

Nota Bene's textbase will do this, but for speed of operation, the database must first be indexed, a very time-consuming operation, though one time only, and one that can be left to run by itself. For my first indexing operation, I had about 720 abstracts on 12 separate files, spread over three disks. The task took about 3 hours on a standard PC. An extra disk is needed to store the files containing the indexing information, and the size of the total textbase is effectively limited only by the space available for these index files. The size of the index files depends in turn on the number of index entries, which can be reduced if users know what they will be looking for, and specify which words are to be indexed, rather than taking the easy option of "index all words".

Once the text is indexed, searches can be made as a stand-alone operation or from within Nota Bene's word processing module. Search words can be joined by boolean combinations of "and", "or" and "not". A "wildcard" feature allows one to imply all words with a common prefix (to be linked by "or"), but these are displayed before the search starts, so that unwanted instances can be removed. Entries can only be retrieved based on words actually occurring in the index. The programme does not make conceptual links or search for synonyms. The search itself is very fast, and results in a sequential display of the entries satisfying the search criteria. As each such entry is displayed, users can decide whether to transfer it to a file, transfer it to an open word processor document, or ignore it and pass to the next one. Each accepted entry is tagged with unobtrusive footnotes which indicate what was the search request and what was the name of the file from which the entry came. Then users print out their harvest of abstracts and heads for the library to read the originals and make more notes, which can in turn be added to the textbase.

The machine readable version of CONNECTIONS provides a useful starting point for a personal data base of abstracts and bibliographies. No doubt other microcomputer packages (XYINDEX for example) could do the same sort of job as Nota Bene. Like most people, I like what I'm used to. [CONNECTIONS and PC MAGAZINE recommend ASK SAM, but WordPerfect itself will do a crude job (without ANDs and ORs. Ed.)

Nota Bene is a [XYWRITE-based] word processor for scholarly applications, integrated with a textbase programme for indexing and retrieval. It is very powerful and requires several months work with the manual & the context sensitive help to become a proficient user. It can be purchased from Dragonfly Software, 409 Fulton St, Suite 202, Brooklyn, NY 11201, USA. Various organizations have group purchase schemes, including the (US) Modern Language Assoc [MLA].

A more detailed example comes from a textbase of 1,065 abstracts, containing 161,847 words in total. There were 13,749 keywords which could be searched on. The 2 management files took up 177K & 178K respectively, leaving only 7K bytes free on a standard 360K floppy disk. This means that the textbase can grow no larger [if I stay only with floppies] unless the number of keywords is drastically reduced by using techniques given in the manual. One could also buy a larger capacity mass storage device [such as a hard disk or the new 1.4M 3 1/2" floppies]. Serious work with textbases requires several megabytes.

I wanted to find abstracts dealing with WOMEN and NETWORKS, but not AGING. The following case insensitive search was specified:

WOM* implying WOMAN or WOMAN'S or WOMEN or WOMEN'S [After reviewing the list, all instances were chosen]

and

NETWORK* implying any of the 9 words with this root
[After reviewing the list, all instances were chosen]

and not

AG* implying any of 39 words with this root
[After reviewing the list, only aging related words were selected for the not condition.]

Nota Bene then created the following case insensitive search criterion:
(((WOMAN \or WOMAN'S \or WOMEN \or WOMEN'S) \and (NETWORK \or NETWORK' \or NETWORK-
APPROACH \or NETWORKDS \or NETWORKERS \or NETWORKING \or NETWORKS \or NETWORKS' \or NETWORKSVOL)) \and \not (((AGE \or AGED \or AGING \or AGINGVOL)))

After searching the management files (not the abstracts themselves), Nota Bene reported that 30 texts satisfied the search criterion and gave the option of proceeding with output of those abstracts. The texts were presented 1 at a time, so that an informed decision could be made whether to transfer each 1 to a disk file (or to an open word processor file) or whether to pass to the next.

Two examples follow from the 30 entries I found:

author[CAMPBELL, KAREN.dept[Soc,univ[Vanderbilt.year[1987. title["Untitled". pubname[Working paper.vol[no[pages[:
keys[text[|Despite the conventional wisdom that employed women suffer by dint of their exclusion from "old-boy" networks, there has been little investigation of gender differences in networks and their implications for occupational outcomes. This paper represents a first step toward incorporating network concepts into analysis of gender-based occupational inequalities. I document differences between the job-related networks of women and men in a sample of recent job-changers in four white-collar occupations. Women know persons in fewer occupations than men; their networks are negatively affected by having children younger than six, and by changing jobs in response to their spouses mobility. Men's networks are unaffected by these constraints.

author[YI, EUNHEE KIM.dept[Anthropology,univ[Chicago.year[1986.title["Implications of Conjugal Role Segregation For Extrafamilial Relationships: A Network Model." pubname[SOCIAL NETWORKS.vol[8.no[pages[: 119-147.keys[text[|The present paper derives an intrafamily interaction network from the conjugal role segregation and examines the consequences of the density of interaction and of the individual positions in the network for the external relationships of the family.
It is shown that the less cohesive interaction network within the family with the segregated conjugal roles leads to the extensive involvement in extrafamilial relationships and that the position of mother/wife as a liaison person within the family results in the pivotal position of women in maintaining extramarital kinship.

Other options could have been chosen for setting up and searching this textbase. The starting delimiter could have been AUTHOR[, a short form marker could have been TEXT[and the ending delimiter could have been a double carriage return. The use of the designated keywords for making up my own very large omit list would have saved space and speeded up the indexing process. Eventually the textbase could be edited to eliminate double-entries, (of working papers that later appear again, because of formal publication).

COMPUTER STUFF

FOR BIG BLUE, TRANSITIVITY MEANS BLACK & BLUE

IBM's operations were recently disrupted for 72 hours by an electronic Xmas card. Someone at the Tech'l U of Clausthal (W. Ger.) sent out a graphics-laden card on IBM's PROFS mail system (via Bitnet/Earn). The card quickly became a hit, & was passed on to expanding Ns of others, gobbling up expanding chunks of memory. Because IBM uses PROFS for most of its erstwhile 'paperwork,' the company was effectively shut down. [Toronto Globe & Mail 21 Dec 87].

ENHANCING COLLABORATION

INSNA member Duane Bay reports that "our group -- the Systems Concept Lab of Xerox Palo Alto Research Ctr -- is building computer software tools to support collaboration. These graphically oriented tools are malleable with respect to task & personal style. We are especially interested in supporting collaboration in system design (our business) & between widely separated sites. I am studying how we collaborate & how we can improve our collaboration because the quality of the tools we create for collaborating will be limited by the quality of our collaboration." ["Sense of the whole: computer support for collaboration." Paper presented at the annual meeting of the Organization Development Inst, Williams Bay WI, 5/86.

THE VIRTUAL CLASSROOM

INSNA members S Roxanne Hiltz & Murray Turoff have set up this distance education project via their EIES computerized conferencing system. Micros, modems, phones & software link students & profs, allowing group & individual instruction & chat between students. Students do not have to adhere to a fixed schedule of class meetings: they use computerized conferencing to pick times they will review lectures, ask questions, take tests, etc. On-line feedback devices evaluate the efficacy of learning. Info: Computerized Conferencing & Communications Ctr, New Jersey Inst of Technology, Newark NJ 07102.

LANGUAGE, LINGUISTICS, LITERARY ANALYSIS

There's now a software review & low-cost distribution system for academics in these fields. It invites software developers to submit their packages for review & possible inclusion in the distribution process. In addition, qualified reviewers will get $100 per review. Info: Barbara Robson, Ctr for Applied Linguistics, 1118 22 St, NW, Washington DC 20037.

USING "S" TO ANALYZE MIGRATION TABLES

"S" is a computer system running under UNIX. It provides interactive capabilities for data analysis & graphics. WALDO TOBLER (Geog, Cal-Santa Barbara) has prepared documentation for students & professionals on how to use "S" to study migration tables & networks.

TRANSPORTATION ROUTE

is an IBM-PC interactive program for finding routes on transportation networks. Nets may have up to 512 nodes & 16,384 links. Includes procs for finding the shortest path between 2 points, sequences of up to 50 stops, finds minimum spanning tree, times or distances between all points. Graphics display. Requires 192K, color graphics, 8087 math chip. $99 from Eastern Software Products, PO Box 15328, Alexandria VA 22309 [703-549-5469].

KINSHIP NETS

FAMILY ROOTS provides a family historical record database. Provides descendant, ancestor & pedigree charts, with name, categorical & relational search capacity. IBM-PC. $185 from Quinsept, PO Box 216, Lexington MA 02173 [617-641-2930].

USING "PROLOG" TO STUDY NETWORKS

PROLOG is a programm language built around symbolic language. It's inherent cognitive network capabilities may well be transferable to social network analysis. See Clara & John Cuadrado, "PROLOG Goes to Work," BYTE, 8/85.

A CLOSET NETWORK MANAGER?

LOTUS AGENDA groups items of information into user-defined categories. It will assign items into categories automatically & will keep an item in several categories at 1'ce. It claims to have powerful ways of tracing items (read 'nodes') thru categories (read 'links'), including the use of synonyms & filters. $395 for IBM PCs with hard disk. Info: Lotus, 55 Cambridge Pkwy, Cambridge MA 02142 [617-577-8500].

DECISIONMAKER

is a conflict analysis program that claims to forecast the outcome of a current negotiation or conflict, predict the likely consequences of a strategy & determine the best course of action. IBM-PC. Waterloo Engineering Software, 237 Park Ave, New York NY 10017 [800-265-2766].

COMMUNITY LIBERATED -- AND LOST

Toronto's Marshall McLuhan Programme in Culture & Technology set up a trans-atlantic modern dance, 10/87, in which 1 of the dancers was to be in Toronto & 1 in Geneva -- linked by video & with a PC/synthesizer hookup causing the Toronto dancer's movement to make music in Geneva). The day before the event was to take place, the stock market crashed. As a result, the donated satellite connection was withdrawn: Zurich gnomes had bought the time for hi financial talks.
