Voice $24.99

Staff Pick: "The Day the Falls Stood Still is the ideal historical novel to read while watching the Ken Burns PBS special on National Parks. It deals with early environmentalism, myth, love, heartache, loss as well as the political and financial deals made in the name of harnessing energy. Bess evolves from a sheltered God-fearing young woman into a fierce heroine. If you are at all interested in the majesty of Niagara Falls you must read this novel by Cathy Marie Buchanan."

Grove Press $23

Staff Pick: Sherman Alexie's stories can be hilarious and they can be heartbreaking—and they sometimes manage to be both within the same space. Balancing the cultural, comic and tragic has become Alexie's trademark. The stories in War Dances amuse and entertain, but they also open a window into a way of life.

Chronic City

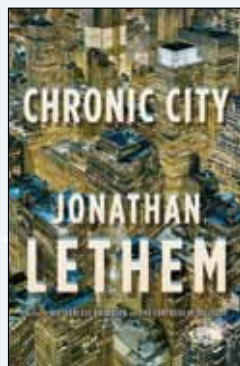

Jonathan Lethem

The acclaimed author of Motherless Brooklyn and The Fortress of Solitude returns with a roar in this gorgeous, searing portrait of Manhattanites wrapped in their own delusions, desires and lies.

Doubleday $27.95

Staff Pick: "Lethem's Manhattan is full of secrets, spectacle, revelation and the brilliantly obtuse, all blended together in a strangely claustrophobic fashion; his greasy, smoky island, even more than our own, is to be laughed at, and feared. It's an island, a book, to be celebrated."

—Dustin Kurtz, McNally Jackson, New York, NY

The Promised World

Atria $25

Staff Pick: "In The Promised World, a suicide by police, the inexplicable bond shared between twins, and the mysterious history of one family are the elements that propel this mesmerizing tale from a masterful storyteller. Stitches

David Small

A silent movie masquerading as a book, Stitches is as much a memoir as a tale of redemption that informs us that things can get better, that good can emerge from evil and that art has the power to transform.

Norton $24.95

9780393068573

Staff Pick: "This graphic novel/memoir by esteemed children's author/illustrator David Small bears a passing resemblance to Allison Bechdel's best-selling Fun Home: it's a story of secretive, dysfunctional parents and the author's pursuit of a life in art. But Small's story of growing up in the 1950s is more primal and emotional—sometimes terrifyingly so—and the artwork in his swirling scenes and brutally realized facial expressions has the mysterious power of bad dreams. Emotionally wrenching and artistically soaring, Stitches is one of the most powerful graphic novels I have ever read, and sure to become a classic of the genre."

Staff Pick: "From marching with Martin Luther King, Jr. at the age of 10-years-old, to the inauguration of Barack Obama, David Alan Grier takes us on a tour of recent history as seen through the eyes and told through the words of a comedic genius. Nothing is off-limits in this funny and one-of-a-kind memoir."

Staff Pick: "Francine Prose is a writer's writer—and a reader's writer—who brings intelligence and grace to any topic. Her musings on Frank's famous diary in context as a literary work uncovers the power of the young girl's vision beyond her historical context, and sheds new light on both the work itself and its legacy in the decades since the Holocaust. Fans of Prose, as well as anyone interested in how artistic inspiration can arise from hardship, will treasure this accessible and insightful work of literary criticism."
