

Decision Guide: How to Protect Your Baby Against Respiratory Syncytial Virus (RSV) During Pregnancy

RSV can lead to severe illness in babies under 6 months and is the leading cause of infant hospitalizations in the US. Have you had Abrysvo (the Pfizer RSV YES NO vaccine) in a previous pregnancy? Currently, there is not enough information to Abrysvo is the only RSV vaccine approved suggest getting another for pregnant people. dose of Abrysvo. Instead, your baby should receive Would you prefer to receive the maternal RSV nirsevimab. vaccine (Abrysvo), or would you like your baby to receive the nirsevimab immunization? BABY ME You can choose either to get a vaccine during pregnancy or to have your baby receive an immunization after birth.* Click here for more details Are you between 32 through 36 weeks of pregnancy? NOT YET I'M PAST THAT YES WINDOW Is it RSV season? Nirsevimab (Beyfortus) Your baby should get nirsevimab: NO YES At birth and up to 8 months if they are born between September 1 and March 31 • In October if they are born Get Abrysvo at outside this timeframe 32 through 36 weeks if it's RSV season *There are uncommon situations where the baby should be offered nirsevimab even if you got the RSV vaccine: (1) You have an immune problem where you might not respond as well as others to the vaccine in making antibodies for the baby, and (2) you got the RSV vaccine, but your baby was born before a full 14 days had passed. Get Abrysvo now  RSV season is from September 1 and January 31 in most parts of the US.