Antitrust Guidelines for CI Meetings

The following provides participants in Chlorine Institute meetings with the most general principles of antitrust laws. The many different situations in which the antitrust laws may be implicated are not covered by this document. Any questions about the possible risks of antitrust liability should be referred to Institute counsel.

DO

- Have meeting agendas and minutes of meetings involving potentially sensitive issues approved by counsel prior to each meeting and before distribution.
- Fully describe in the minutes all actions taken at the meeting. Consult counsel on any matter with antitrust implications.

NEVER

- Agree, discuss or exchange with competitors information on product prices; methods of quoting prices; the establishment of uniform costs and markups or price differentials; or the submission of collusive, noncompetitive rigged bids. These activities have been found to constitute direct price-fixing.
- Agree or discuss with competitors methods of restricting price advertising; the use of specified accounting methods; limits on production or the establishment of quotas; fixing minimum product quantities sold; or fixing the amount of basic ingredients used in or resulting from production. These activities have been found to constitute arrangements indirectly affecting price.
- Agree to exclude, refuse to deal with, or retaliate against existing members of the association, potential new members of the association, or particular classes of suppliers or customers.
- Make any arrangements to divide the marketplace or allocate customers.
- Agree to consider excluding from guidelines or recommendations any products, services or equipment which may be safely used for the intended purpose.
